UPLAND, SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, JULY 30, 1920

$3.50 PER YEAR

TWENTY-NINE CITED FOR DECORATION

Twenty-nine of the nine hundred and seven Californians who received during the recent war, decorations or citations for distinguished service are from San Bernardino County and five of them are from our own town of Upland.

A statement has just been issued by Genevieve Ambrose, secretary of the War history department of the California Historical Survey Commission, regarding the number of men who have been awarded honors. The information was obtained chiefly from the pages of the Official U. S. Bulletin and from local press clippings.

Los Angeles County leads in the greatest number of awards there being 217 receiving men from that county who were cited or decorated. San Francisco comes next with 175 and Alameda third with 122.

The list of men from San Bernardino county is given below and Upland citizens feel very proud of their own men who won such distinction in the world war. They have all returned to their pre-war peaceful occupations, making no mention of the brave deeds they must have performed to have been awarded the merits.

BREAKS FAIL, HITS BANK

A serious accident was averted on Sunday afternoon by the presence of mind of C. C. Barnes of Ontario who, accompanied by his wife and family, was returning from Camp Baldy. Coming over the Hogs Back the brakes of Mr. Barnes car refused to work, and it seemed that every instant the machine would go over the embankment with its occupants.

Mr. Barnes stayed with the sinking ship and managed to keep the road until he reached a place where he could turn into the bank. With the exception of Mrs. Barnes and Miss Althea Barnes who jumped when they learned the brakes refused to hold, the rest of the party received only a shaking up. The car was not damaged but one of the front tires was ruined. Beside Mr. and Mrs. Barnes the party consisted of Miss Wilhelmina and Miss Althea Barnes, Alex Cordes and Frank Wodruft.

FIFTY MAIL SACKS DESTROYED IN FIRE

Fifty sacks of mail including registered pouches, first class mail and parcels were burned shortly before two o'clock this morning in the baggage room of the Santa Depot at San Bernardino.

The mail was for San Bernardino and Redlands, and a portion of the mail for the former city was saved but many pouches were completely destroyed and others badly damaged.

The origin of the fire is not known yet, but Santa Fe officials believe that the fire must have started within a mail sack. The baggage room was closed at 1:15 a. m. and there was no indication of fire. Fifteen minutes later the smoke was detected and the Santa Fe men found the mail sacks, most of them on a truck, in flames.

The greater portion of the mail was taken from Santa Fe train No. 10 at 11:20 last night. Some was being held in the baggage room for the Redlands train this morning. The extent of the loss will not be known until the postal inspectors check the pouches. The only damage done to the building was to the woodwork and a partition in the office.

Both the city and the Santa Fe fire departments responded immediately to the alarm. Chemical extinguishers failed to stop the fire. The Santa Fe men pulled out as many burning sacks as they could reach.

THE FISH LAUGHED TO SEE WHAT FUN

Friday night came a telegram to D. A. Field from San Diego in which it stated, "Come to San Diego for a fishing trip. Be here early Saturday morning. Taggart" and no sooner was the word received than Mr. Field gathered up a party and away they went toward the Southern city. Members of the party were Messrs W. K. Beattie, C. P. Fuller, Frank Weber, D. A. Field, and the host Mr. Taggart.

But the best part or perhaps the worse part of this story is rather nerve trying for C. P. Fuller, accountant and secretary-manager of the Citizens Land and Water Company, was never cut out for a sailor.

Early Saturday morning the launch skipped artistically over the waters of the San Diego bay and as the sunlight of the morning glistened in the rippling waters, the entire party was happy—all but Fuller. Time went on, so did the launch, so did Fuller. The party waxed gay, the fish played tag with the hooks, men of the party caught several, but Fuller—fed 'em.

Noon came and the hungry party sat down to lunch—all but Fuller. Soon after lunch Frank Weber joined Fuller and the two communed together as two souls with but a single thought—while the fishes sang hosannas to the joy of life.

When the party was over Messrs. Fuller and Weber were anything but full and the main land looked like the promised land to them for when they stood upon it their stomachs stood still.

MORTGAGE FORE- CLOSURE $32,500

Joe Topitzky of Los Angeles Monday filed suit in San Bernardino for the foreclosure of a mortgage carrying a note of $32,500 and interest for three ears, against C. R. Nuetzel and others, owners of a large acreage in the Cucamonga district.

Smith and Breslin, attorneys for the holder of the note, have asked for $3200 attorney's fees.

The complaint alleges that W. H. Anderson and wife signed the note and gave a mortgage to Arthur E. Hull, who discounted it to Topitzky. The note was due June 12, 1920, they say, and no interest has been paid at all.

This is the largest foreclosure suit filed in San Bernardino county in many months. The case will likely come up for trial some time this fall.

GRAVEL TRUCK P. E. TRAIN IN COLLISION

Driving his truck loaded with gravel for the Euclid avenue paving job across the P. E. lines at the Junction this morning, and looking in the wrong direction, A. L. Marx, contractor, collided with the car going west, with serious results to his truck. No one was hurt, but the truck is badly damaged and a big hole torn in the road near where the collision took place. The P. E. car and its passengers were not hurt, and after a short delay proceeded on to Los Angeles.

The conductors of the local cars who were standing there when the accident happened, say that Mr. Marx was looking west instead of east, and was unable to back or go ahead when he discovered his danger.

COUNTY LIBRARY IS GROWING STEADILY

Report of Miss Carrie Waters, county librarian, was Monday presented to the Board of Supervisors, and reflects the extensive expansion of the county library during the past year.

Total of 126 branches are now maintained in the county, 17 branches having been added during the year.

The total number of books now in the county library is 45,542 an increase of 7614.

"As much is now being accomplished in the educational field through visual instruction, the county library is building up a collection to aid the teachers in that work," says the report.

Copies of the famous paintings, color bird pictures, stereographs and sets of pictures printed by National Geographic society are now to be had through the county library. As music is essential part of a child's life, phonograph records are now furnished the schools and correlate with the subjects taken up in the schools.

"The circulation of books and magazines for the fiscal year as far as reported was 164,528, being a gain of 17,071 over the preceding year. The number of the borrowers reported is 14,627, an increase of 3995 over 1918-19. The total number of books sent out to branches during the year was 21,560.

An itemized statement shows the other facts about the handling of the books and magazines.

WE DON'T USE 'EM IN THIS BUSINESS

A lad appeared at Mac's Drug store inquiring for a meat augur, and Kenneth Beattie being anxious to see that Mac's customers received good service, inquired of Mac the whereabouts of said instrument. Mac immediately remembered that he had loaned it and Kenneth was on his way. All went well until he arrived at The News office, when the News society editor endeavored to wait on the young man.

The mechanical force assisted in unraveling the difficulty but the joke wasn't alone on Kenneth for Mrs. Leahy still insists that in the newspaper and publishing business meat augurs are not used.

Finally Kenneth arrived home and his father endeavored to send him after a round square and the son remarked, "Dad, you know all about that don't you—the joke's on me, but most boys seem to have had the same joke played on them."

HARDING-COOLIDGE CLUB ORGANIZED

Upland today has a Harding-Coolidge Club and present indications are that it will go far beyond all expectations as an organization.

The action of the Republican Convention at Chicago was unanimously endorsed and the following official family for the Upland Harding-Coolidge Club was selected.

The club adopted a resolution endorsing the candidacy of Judge Phil D. Swing for Congress. Judge Swing is a brother to City Attorney Ralph E. Swing and the following resolution was adopted by the meeting.

Whereas, The lemon industry is facing the most critical period of its existence due to the heavy importation of Sicilian lemons, and to save this industry which is the backbone of this community, we feel that it is necessary to have a protective tariff which will be fair to the lemon growers of California and

Whereas, At a meeting of the accredited representatives of San Bernardino, Riverside, Orange and Imperial counties, Judge Phil D. Swing, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the 11th Congressional district, received the unanimous indorsement of this meeting, and

'DOWN ON THE FARM' COLONIAL SUNDAY

These two things abound in Mac Sennett's newest and greatest comedy sensation, "Down on the Farm." If you think there is nothing more to farm life than early rising, hard labor in the broiling sun, and then to bed when the cows come in from the pasture, you don't know the half of it. She was so young and he was so villainous—yet she foiled him! Where could she in all her innocence, have learned so much of worldly wisdom? That's the secret! They all know more than you think "Down on the Farm."

This side-splitting comedy will be shown at the Colonial Theatre Sunday night, along with the two good educational films.

MISS MUIR MATRON AT SAN ANTONIO

With the arrival yesterday from Van Couver, B. C. of Miss Isabel Muir to assume the superintendency of the San Antonio hospital, the pressing need of better hospital facilities for Ontario, Upland and surrounding territory is again called to the attention of the public.

Judge Pollock of the hospital association board, stated today that even the institution's office is now being used as a patient's room, two being quartered there and last night it was necessary to accommodate one patient on the veranda.

Ridiculous to try To attempt to meet the hospital needs of this section with a hospital of only fifteen beds, is the height of the ridiculous in the opinion of Judge Pollock, who stated today that something must be done and done quick. Miss Muir, the new superintendent comes with an excellent record behind her. She has had the best training and saw service with the Red Cross throughout the war in Europe, where she made an enviable name for herself.

Since the departure of Miss Charlotte Black, several weeks ago, the San Antonio has been in temporary charge of Mrs. Gorgiana Wallace Troutwine, who proved herself most efficient.

Mrs. Troutwine and her staff were recently highly complimented by the state hospital examiner, who found everything about the hospital in perfect shape except its lack of room.

WANT RATES INCREASED

Seven Southern California warehouse companies applied to the Railroad Commission this week for authority to increase their charges for storage and handling grain and beans. They want to establish a rate of not exceeding $2.00 per ton per season. Their present charge is $1.00 per ton. Increased cost of operation is given as the reason for the desired change in rates. The application points out that labor that formerly cost $1.50 to $2.00 per man per day can not be obtained for less than $4.00 a day at present. The men formerly worked nine or ten hours a day; now they work but eight, and according to the applicants there is a decrease in labor efficiency. Existing shortage rates were formulated when beans were selling at four cents a pound and they are now selling at 10 cents a pound and better. Old prices on grain ranged in the neighborhood of $1.00 per 100 pounds; for some time past prices have been in the neighborhood of $3.00 per 100 pounds.

Following is a list of the companies seeking an increase: Imperial Grain and Warehouse Co., Huntington Beach Warehouse Company, Sawtelle Warehouse Company, C. C. Collins Company, San Joaquin Warehouse Company, Freeman & Nichols, Farmers' Grain and Milling Co., rig. Vice Chairman; H. C. Moore, Secretary; H. S. Wilson, Treasurer. Ways and Means Committee appointed by the chairman: H. S. Wilson, chairman, E. C. Mehl, J. D. Howe, L. R. Bradley, W. K. Beattie.

Membership committee appointed by the chairman: J. F. Anderson, chairman; R. R. Wisely, E. C. Harwood, F. H. Manker, Dr. J. H. Dawson.

Publicity and Entertainment Committee appointed by chairman: C. E. Grier, chairman; W. E. Westland, A. H. Johnson, Geo. E. Bunker and M. E. Hill.

JUNIOR REPUBLIC A MARKED SUCCESS

Twenty-five years ago William R. George of Freeville, N. Y., founded the first of what are known as the George Junior Republics, miniature governments for young boys and girls to learn the dignity of work and value of self control and the nature of a Republican government. Many states now have them and Mr. George aims through the national association of Junior Republics to have one in every state in the Union.

There is one near Chino which though very close to this colony is not very well known and a few details regarding it may be of interest.

There are sixty-seven boys between the ages of fourteen and eighteen living at the George Junior Republic, who are self governing. They elect their own officers, make their own laws, and come together once a week to hear complaints, and pass judgment as to the best form of correction. The whole idea is to correct a fault, not punish it.

The boys attend school in the morning, work in the afternoon. There are several departments and each lad may choose his own form of work. On the farm they raise grain, vegetables and alfalfa, and there is a dairy, with all of its products, a pigery, and a poultry farm.

A good monthly magazine is produced by the boys, they have their own print shop and most of the articles are written by the lads themselves.

An electric shop and a repair shop also form part of the equipment of the Republic, and each department has its own expense account furnishing supplies to the other departments when needed. All this requires book keeping which is done by the boys as part of their education.

Everything about the place is kept in the pink of condition, all the farm yards and stables being as clean as possible.

A great many people take an interest in this Republic, sending jams and other good things for the boys to eat as well as supplying them with wholesome reading material. A visit to the farm will be well worth while, and too great an interest cannot be taken in this work which is making of neglected and wayward boys strong, noble and independent characters.

JAIL AND FINE FOR PETER CARBONE

Peter Carbone, arrested between here and Cucamonga several weeks ago for violating the county's prohibition ordinances, will remain in the county jail for thirty days and will pay a fine of $100.

Frank Dominguez of Los Angeles, Carbone's attorney, pleaded ignorance of the law for his client.

Carbone claimed that between Fontana and San Bernardino he was ordered to meet a party and bring back a load. The wine was loaded on his truck and covered with fruit boxes.

Enroute to Los Angeles all went well until Carbone passed Turner avenue when he ran into a rig occupied by two and they were thrown from their buggy which was badly smashed. Carbone kept on going and as he was coming up the Cucamonga Hill near Upland, he ran into Charles J. Haines of Santa Monica. Carbone's truck went into the ditch and the orange boxes toppled off, revealing the booze beneath. He was arrested by Constable Hirst of Cucamonga and Traffic Officer F. Freeman and lodged here in jail.

Carbone says he does not know who hired him to carry the booze. The wine—550 gallons—is now in the custody of Sheriff Shay.

EMPLOYEES FORM THE OPSAW CLUB

For the purpose of carrying on educational work pertaining particularly to the electrical industry, for building up good fellowship among themselves, for the cultivation of courtesy in dealing with each other and the general public, for the building of a strong and united organization and for social diversion, the employees of the Ontario Power Company and the San Antonio Water Company announce the organization of the Opsaw Club, indicating the two organizations.

At the organization meeting Mr. Glenn D. Smith was elected president; Frank L. Allen, vice president; Mrs. Amy Bidwell, secretary; and A. J. Hall, treasurer.

On the executive committee are A. C. Reynolds, Robert Manley, C. W. Walker, E. A. Magill and Oscar Galtner.

Other committees named are: Entertainment—J. P. Fredendall, chairman; H. C. Kennedy, Miss Vera Humphreys, Miss Vivian Abercrombie, Mrs. Abbie Kendrick.

Educational—A. J. Hall, chairman; C. W. Walker, Frank L. Allen, chairman; W. H. Saunders, George Cable.

Music—Mrs. C. W. Walker, chairman; Mrs. Amy Bidwell, Mrs. Abbie Kendrick.

Men's Welfare—John W. Bryden, chairman; Carl Graves, J. C. B-n-fold.

Women's Welfare—Mrs. H. C. Kennedy, chairman; Mrs. Oscar Galtner, Mrs. Fred G. Powell.

Thursday has been selected as club night and meetings will probably be held every two weeks. One of the features of the club will be the carrying on of a regular course in practical electricity. Other subjects of educational value will be taken up in the way of illustrated talks and these will combine entertainment with instruction. Some part of each club meeting will be given to some form of diversion. Husbands and wives of employees are to have the full privileges of the club and under the authority of the entertainment committee guest cards may be issued.

The progressive policy of the Ontario Power Company and San Antonio Water Company follows through the company organizations and the spirit of cooperation and good fellowship that exists among the employees is a strong factor in maintaining the excellent service rendered by the companies.

The element of good fellowship that exists among the employees was what led up to the organization of a club as they all felt they would receive benefits and pleasures by getting together and building up a closer acquaintanceship.

THE DISASTROUS END OF A REVOLUTIONARY EX- PERIMENT

From The National Republican

Twenty-four year ago Democratic leadership proposed to the country, as a remedy for the industrial and financial depression resulting from the enactment of the first Wilson tariff law, the free and unlimited coinage of silver on a flat basis. As the price of silver bullion at that time was but half that which would have been fictitiously given it by its coinage at a ratio with gold of sixteen to one, the Democratic party was in the position of demanding a fifty cent dollar. That free silver coinage meant "cheap money" was not denied, but the argument was made to debtors that they could more easily discharge their obligations with a debased currency.
In a day when property had been so generally mortgaged to save property owners from ruin under the operations of a prosperity-killing tariff law, the argument was effective with many. It was the wage-earner, the investors and people of fixed incomes who killed free silver on the ground that they did not wish to be paid off in a depreciated dollar. The people were so well convinced by subsequent developments that there was a more rational and successful method of restority, that the issue of free silver passed out of politics, and was forgotten even by the party and leadership which proposed it.

Through the operations of a policy vastly more inflationist than free silver,—that of tremendous issuance of credit currency until our money stock has been increased far beyond the legitimate requirements of business,—we now have, not a fifty cent dollar, but a thirty cent dollar that is still shrinking. The argument is made that this huge inflation was necessary. But what made it necessary, more than all else, was that the administration proceeded from the very beginning of our war operations to treat the dollar as if it were worth thirty cents.

The vast money waste of the war was something more than mere carelessness of values on the part of the government's money spenders. The administration, dominated by men "revolutionary beyond the dreams of the socialist leaders of Europe," as President Wilson's appointee and press agent, Prof.
Geo. D. Herron, confessed, saw in the fiscal phases of the war an opportunity to revolutionize the economic order and bring about a redistribution of wealth thru political processes. The cost plus contracts, the wholesale recklessness with which public funds were expended, the resistance to higher pay for soldiers accompanied by the constant pressure for higher pay for civilian workers in public and private employment,—these things were all part of a cunningly conceived and secretly directed plan of industrial and economic revolution
under government auspices.

It is evident that either there was such a plan in mind, or such waste as accompanied the government's operations was personally criminal in its intent. It requires something more than the mere theory of gross incompetency, however plausible that may be, to account for thousands of almost unbelievable things that were done during the war and since by officials and agents of the administration, the details of which have been often recited.

Contractors were encouraged through the cost plus contracts, to do two things: increase fictitiously the compensation, and reduce systematically the output of labor. This was done at a time when four million men were being drafted into the national service to give not only their whole time and effort, but even their lives, if need be, at a wage increased from fifteen to thirty dollars a month only over administration opposition. It was done at a time when millions of Americans were being asked to save and sacrifice, give to war causes and buy war bonds, in order that there might be more money for the wasters to throw to the winds in a riot of reckless expenditure the like of which never before was witnessed in all the world's history.

But the purpose back of this attempt to use the war as the background of socialistic reconstruction failed. Certain numbers of voters were purchased for the party in power by it, it is true. There was immediate party advantage in destroying the efficiency of the transportation lines of the country through the inroduction of the "take it slow and easy," "get all you can and give as little for it as you can"
system. But there was a dreary "morning after" in all this that soon came upon the country, and it was discovered that doubling the cost of transportation to carriers, and cutting in two the delivery capacity of each freight car, so impaired the efficiency and increased the operating costs of industry in general that the baneful effects came in higher prices that more than equalized the benefits of increased pay and decreased work. So in all industry. To give a wage earner or public job holder six dollars a day where he got only three before, and then through the rise in prices incident to the general application of this system make his living costs 150 per cent.
more, didn't make the recipient
as grateful as he was expected to be to the dreamers and demagogues who thought the war made good camouflage for the home made brand of near bolshevism.

What has happened is that the speculators and profiteers have in this process of constantly shifting readjustment of values,
had such an opportunity as never before came to the financial and industrial adventurer. The government's official records indicate that the number of millionaires in the country has more than trebled since 1914 in other words, twice as many millionaires have been made in six years as in the preceding century and a third of national history,—yet without our having materially increased the nation's productive capacity, extended nation's productive capacity, extended our cultivated land area, developed the resources or improved or extended our transportation facilities,—the enterprises which created most of the fortunes of the pre-Wilson period. Assuming that the policies of the administration were sincerely intended to bring about a wider distribution of wealth through government intervention, the actual effect has been the opposite of what was contemplated, as so often happens when the theories of mere doctrinaires are put to the test.

Wealth is the legitimate reward of the man who, through enterprise, skill or foresight, adds to the productive capacity of the nation. Wealth acquired by the man who develops industry,
builds a factory, sinks a mine,

constructs a railway or performs any other service rendering large return to society, costs other people nothing, for the people generally share in the distribution of the increased sum of actual value developed in the nation.
The demagogue or doctrinaire who rails against wealth thus acquired by the individual who thinks to do and does do, what other men have left undone to develop the resources and improve or cheapen the service rendered by any institution or es-

FEDERATION MEETING HELD IN SANTA ANA YESTERDAY—

A meeting of the Southern District chairmen and presidents' council was called for yesterday by the president of the Southern District, Mrs. A. W. Wohlford of Encinitas, which was held in Santa Ana. Those going from San Bernardino County were Mrs. Grace Stanley, chairman of legislation, Mrs. M. A. Basch of Coton, county federation president, and Mrs. Whitmer also of Coton.

TO THE REPUBLICAN WOMEN OF UPLAND—

All the women, registered voters of Upland, who are interested in either forming a Harding-Coolidge Club for themselves, or joining the one organized last Tuesday by the Republican men of Upland, to which the women have been invited to become members, are asked to meet next Tuesday afternoon at four of the clock in the library, when they can discuss the matter and decide which would be the better proposition.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR GRANDCHILD—

Mrs. W. A. Eastlack was hostess at a delightful children's party last Wednesday afternoon when she entertained a number of girls in honor of her grand daughter Dorothy's birthday.

The afternoon passed very happily in games of various kinds, and the little guest of honor and her friends were served ice cream and cake at the end of a jolly good time.

Those who were invited to Dorothy's party were Dorothy Miller, Gladys Bowden, Ruth Mathews, Margaret Brest, Mary and Louise Norton, Ruth Kent, Frances Roberts, Margaret and Isobel Eastlack.

LIBRARY BOARD PLEASED WITH BOOKS RECEIVED—

In spite of the hot weather yesterday, a hundred and fifty people visited the Upland Library during the afternoon and evening, nearly every one bringing some book to contribute towards the list of gift books. Novels, travels, scientific books, were all received, by the librarian, Mrs. Manker and phone messages were sent from several who were unable to come yesterday saying that they would bring their gift books in as soon as possible.

The library with its pretty ferns and electric fans going steadily was one of the coolest places in Upland yesterday, and those who came, spent a pleasant hour visiting with the librarian and becoming acquainted with many of the treasures of the library, that they had never time to examine before. Books on every conceivable subject are to be found in the Upland Library, gay and grave, humorous and sad, books and magazines to suit every ones taste, and the remark was heard several times, "I had no idea you had so many books and on so many different subjects."

Among the visitors yesterday were Mrs. Nellie Keith of the South Pasadena Library, and Miss Chalfant of the San Bernardino County free Library representing Miss Caroline Waters.

The Board of Trustees and the Librarian wish to thank the public for their response to the request for reading material and they hope that having once started, the books will come pouring in. Any book that you have enjoyed reading, but do not want to keep for future reference will be very gladly received by Mrs. Manker at any time.

A NEW ENJOYMENT AT CAMP BALDY—

Camp Baldy has added another attraction to the many now at that delightful mountain resort, an dthose who care about horse back riding may indulge in the exercise while enjoying a vacation at the Camp. Manager McCulloch says that a number of first class saddle horses have been added to the stables and E. F. Hanlon of Pasadena riding academy will be in charge of the animals and will give riding lessons to the guests of the Camp. Those who already are horse back riders may hire horses and take some very interesting trips along the various trails.

CAFETERIA SUPPER AUGUST 5TH BY WOMAN'S CLUB—

It will very likely be as warm next Thursday night, as last, and those who are wise will make arrangements to enjoy the bountiful Cafeteria supper, which will be served by the Woman's Club from six o'clock on at the Presbyterian basement next Thursday, August 5th. People who are thinking of attending the band concert, and who isn't? will be delighted to know that they can take their families and have a well-cooked dinner, and not fuss about the dishes etc. afterwards. In a cafeteria supper there is always something to suit everybody, and the menu is printed below so that you may see what is being offered before planning to go: Roast pork and apple sauce, roast beef and brown gravy, mashed potatoes, green beans, diced beets, tomato salad, cold slaw, lemon pie, apple pie, cheese, ice cream, cake, coffee.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOURS FOR VISITORS TO THE RIM

William McStay, general agent of the American Travel Bureau which has an office for San Bernardino mountain resorts in the Hellman bank, Los Angeles, spent Wednesday and yesterday in San Bernardino to perfect arrangements for a series of personally conducted tours to the Rim of the World region.

The tentative plan of the tours as outlined by Gordon Smith, president of the Bureau, will bring the travelers through Upland into San Bernardino over the Pacific Electric at 11:05 on Mondays, leaving on the Mountain Auto Lines at 11:15. A stop at Pinecrest will be made for luncheon. Possibly night will be passed in Little Bear Lake resort and the destination at Big Bear will be reached Tuesday evening.

The return journey to Los Angeles will be started Friday morning stopping at Seven Oaks for luncheon. The night will be spent at Forest Home. The tourists will arrive in Los Angeles in time for dinner Saturday.

The fame of the San Bernardino mountains is becoming widespread and the resorts are gradually taking rank among the most popular vacation spot in the west," said McStay. "Dr. Baylis is giving to the San Bernardino range what Frank Miller has given to Riverside in the attractive Mission Inn."

"DOC" BOWMAN IN CHARGE— NUF SED

Tomorrow night a fishing party will leave Upland for San Pedro where they expect to get good sport. All of them are busy today preparing tackle and a fine time is being looked forward to. Those in the party are W. E. Allen, George Bunker, C. Milne, Jess Monroe, Nate Emory of Cucamonga, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Miller and family, and Mr. and Mrs. John McConkey. In Los Angeles the party will be increased by Norman and George Allen. Another one who wishes to join the fishing party is Jim Dinger, and if the permission of his wife can be secured, he will go along too. The safe return of the crowd is assured by the announcement of the fact that "Doc" Bowman is going. A host in himself, he will pilot the fishing tourists safely there and back, knowing this all anxiety on the part of friends of the above is unnecessary.

POPULATION OF COUNTY GIVEN AS 73,401

Census of San Bernardino County was announced yesterday and gives a total of 73,401, just a trifle less than had been estimated.

The increase is 16,695 or 29.4 per cent. The growth of the county in 10 years is approximately equal to the present size of the cities of Redlands and Ontario, the second and third largest cities in the county.

Approximately 63,000 people, it is estimated, reside within a radius of 22 miles of the city of San Bernardino. That is, 63,000 people within this county.

Although the count of the county is completed, the census bureau has not announced the size of various incorporated cities including Needles, Chino, Rialto, Upland, or of the large unincorporated districts such as Highland, Mission and Cucamonga.

LACK OF PUPILS CLOSING EIGHT OF THE COUNTY SCHOOLS

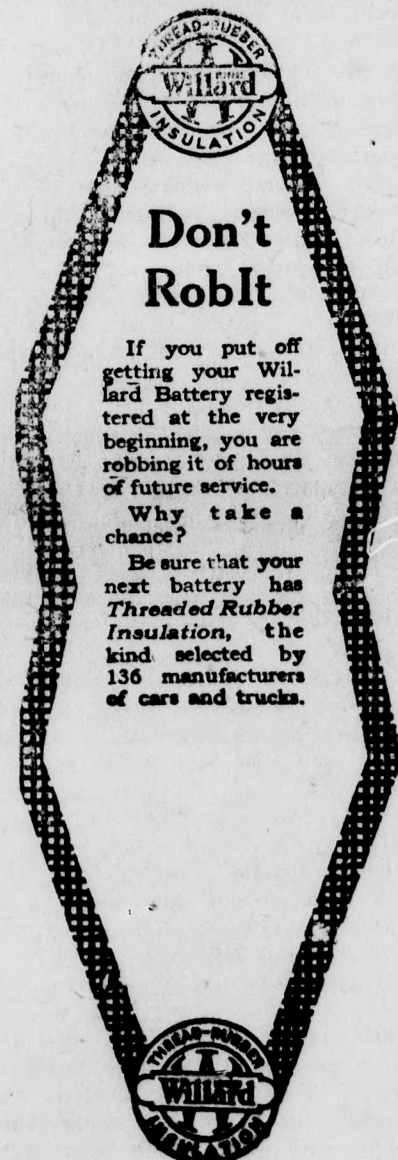

Eight schools in the county will be suspended according to a report made at the office of the county superintendent of schools, Mrs. G. C. Stanley. The reason is that the average daily attendance has been less than five pupils. The schools are Washington, Todd, Kelso, Agua Mansa, Bell, Mountain, Morengo, Rodman and Greenleaf.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Dr. John Michelson, interne just leaving hospital, becomes resident physician at the home of Homer Sidney, Hartley house. Mr. Sidney is an old man, very weak, but tenacious of life. A peculiar atmosphere of the house and grounds, and the surly attitude assumed by Jed, Mr. Sidney's butler, impress Michelson unfavorably. Later he hears the story of the "haunted pool," the spot where Richard Dobson, son of a former owner of Hartley house, had killed his brother, Arthur Dobson.

CHAPTER II.—Michelson meets Isabel, Mr. Sidney's daughter. That night he is awakened by a woman's screams and finds Jed, intoxicated, threatening Mrs. Sidney. He intervenes. Next day Mrs. Sidney makes light of the incident and urges Michelson to keep silent about it.

CHAPTER III.—After Michelson has been a short time at the house Mrs. Sidney urges him to consent to the announcement of his engagement to Isabel, saying it is merely precautionary. Satisfied there is a weighty reason for such an extraordinary request, he complies. Isabel later informs him Jed seeks her hand in marriage.

CHAPTER IV.—Mr. Sidney visits the penitentiary at Alhambra and sees the doctor, the slayer of his brother, and the one about whom revolves the mystery of the haunted pool.

CHAPTER V.—A plumber, doing some work at Hartley house, tells of his fright some time ago when he saw the "ghost" at the pool. Jed relates the story of the Dobson tragedy to the doctor.

CHAPTER VI.—That night Michelson, wandering in the grounds, sees a figure standing by the pool, but does not investigate. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney and Isabel leave on a trip to South America. Michelson meets an acquaintance who tells him of a tragedy at Montevideo which seems to Michelson to have a bearing on the mystery of Hartley house.

CHAPTER VII.—The Sidneys return, and a few days later the appearance of a foreigner, apparently a sailor, throws Jed into an agony of suspicion. He, however, denies any knowledge of the stranger's identity.

CHAPTER VIII.—A few days later Michelson has a caller, Philatus Brown, a lawyer, acting for a mysterious stranger, whose name is Dravada. The lawyer leaves a copy of a document stolen from Mr. Sidney at Montevideo, and warns Michelson to point to a crime committed by Mr. Sidney. Michelson refuses to have any dealings with the lawyer, and warns Dravada to leave. Mrs. Sidney admits she knows the circumstances but will not divulge them.

CHAPTER IX.—Jed is kidnapped from Hartley house. The house is burglarized and Jed's room ransacked. Michelson believes the thieves have secured possession of Sidney's diary, and the support of the confession, which Jed had purloined.

CHAPTER X.—Michelson gets a message from Horwich, a small town nearby, informing him that in an automobile accident a man has been killed and a woman badly hurt. He finds that the man was the lawyer, Brown, and the woman one of the house servants, who had engineered the burglary.

CHAPTER XI.—Jed returns and tells how he had been kept prisoner by Brown and Dravada, they seeking to force him to disclose the whereabouts of the diary. He tells Michelson the thieves did not secure the document, which he has in a safe place. Morgan, head of a detective agency, visits Hartley house, and warns Michelson that the sailor, Dravada, has been seen in the town of mystery and that he will follow it. Michelson refuses to allow the family to be blackmailed.

CHAPTER XII.—While awaiting developments Michelson, feeling that he cannot win her, asks to have his "engagement" to Isabel broken off, but both she and her mother refuse to consider it.

"That's a consolation, in any event," said the housekeeper; "but we never shall be able to take in a new servant again with any ease of mind."

The chauffeur telephoned as Mrs. Aldrich went away. The chase in the night had been useless, as might be expected, and I told him to return home.

Mrs. Aldrich brought me a light breakfast, and one of the gardeners came to say that the dogs had been found in the woods. They had been fed drugged meat and were sick and even now barely able to stand.

I was preparing to go to Mr. Sidney's room when the telephone rang again. It was a call from the village of Horwich, forty miles east, a place of some repute, or ill repute, for the number and character of its drinking places and roadhouses.

The man calling me said he was the constable of the township of Horwich, and asked if he were talking to a person of responsibility. I assured him he was. Then he told me that an automobile accident had occurred two miles out of Horwich and that the only identifying marks suggested Hartley house as a place to make inquiries. He asked if I could come to Horwich. I endeavored to question him over the telephone, but he said there was little information he could give, a man and a woman in a car—man past middle age, a young woman in white;

the man was dead, the woman badly injured.

"I'll be over as soon as possible," I said. "Please keep the effects all together."

There was no doubt in my mind that the quivering little rascal of a lawyer with his precise way and timid but controlling unscrupulousness had come to the end of his road—and at the very moment when he had success in his hand. There was no reason to doubt that the woman was the maid Agnes whom I had surprised at midnight stealing down the stairs from Jed's room with Mr. Sidney's diary.

But if we were rid of the timorous, grasping little attorney, we were in worse difficulties. With the attorney and his Spanish client, we at least knew the manner of dealing. It was disconcerting—I might almost be forgiven the exaggeration of saying it was horrifying—to consider that the diary was being handled by a constable, a sheriff or a coroner or even by any idler or resort-keeper in the village of Horwich.

If the automobile accident had disposed of one ingenious enemy only to make a half-dozen equally unscrupulous ones, or to apprise (I was tempted to think this was worse) one incorruptible officer of the condition of Hartley house—in either event, we were the worse for the change in circumstance.

One of the stablemen knew how to drive a car, and I asked him to bring out the automobile which I used when I went to town. The chauffeur, when he returned, would have been up most of the night. I did not want to impose on him. I might be gone most of the day. In a half-hour we were away toward Horwich. I never had been over the road, which ran by old farms with stone fences and was little traveled except by the people who lived along it.

Originally the place had a respectable tavern. It was called the White Owl. It was still respectable, but oddly enough, it was the success of the White Owl which had attracted the other places.

I inquired for the constable and was told that I should likely find him at the White Owl, he being a frequenter of that place and now having a case which needed a great deal of drinking and talking over.

I went to the White Owl and on entering the barroom, which really had an attractive rather than a disreputable appearance, saw a group of men about a short, broad, square-shouldered fellow who was talking to the interest of half a dozen or more fellows.

My entrance made no diversion, and judging from what I had been told, that the squat, talkative fellow was the constable and that he was telling the story I wanted to know, I decided to remain unidentified, have a bottle of beer—from the bartender, who came half-heartedly from the constable's narration—and thus as an eavesdropper get what I came to get in direct conversation.

I had my bottle of beer, and the bar-

I Had My Bottle of Beer.

tender went back to the group, dominated by the squat, talkative fellow. He was not the comic type of constable. He showed intelligence and decision, but evidently he was fond of a story when he had it to tell. He was saying:

"I was up late because there was a bad set at the Half Day, and Bill Dalley thought he might have trouble with them before he got them on their way. About one o'clock they had a quarrel, without anything but talk, divided into two sets and went away in two cars toward the city. Bill and I split a bottle of beer, and Bill said he'd be going himself. It was nearly one-thirty then, and I thought I'd wait up for Number Eleven at two o'clock and see if anyone got off."

"Bill gave me the keys and told me to shut the place up. I had another bottle of beer and was playing solitaire on the bar when Number Eleven stopped.

"I went to the front door of the bar and looked over toward the station. A man had got off, and he was headed toward the Half Day, which was the only place showing a light. I waited in the doorway, and when he came up, I saw he was a foreigner. He had gold rings in his ears.

"He made as if he wanted to come in. He didn't speak enough English for me to make out what he was saying. I let him in, and he went up to the bar, put down a quarter and pointed toward the whisky. I gave him the bottle, and he pointed to me and smiled. So I said I didn't mind if I did, and we had a drink together. I thought I'd like to know what this fellow wanted in town, so I didn't suggest it was closing time.

"Then I was surprised to hear a car coming along. The other fellow seemed to be expecting it. We both went to the door. The car stopped at the door, and a man helped a woman out. He was a little old shriveled fellow. She was young and pretty.

"The old fellow said something to my foreigner, and he threw his arms in the air, wriggled all over, laughed and fell on the old fellow and kissed him. The old boy struggled and kicked, but the foreigner just picked him right up and kissed him on both cheeks.

"That old boy was mad when he got loose. 'This is unthinkable,' he said. 'It is beyond expression. You human pig! Dog of a man—slobbering beast!' Then he stopped speaking English and said a lot of things the foreigner understood, but it didn't make him mad. His eyes just sparkled. He put a dollar on the bar and pointed to the whisky again.

"Bring our drinks over here," said the old boy, pointing to one of the tables in a far corner of the room.

"They sat down, and the two men talked. The girl didn't seem to have the language. The foreigner was excited. The old boy kept wiping his eyeglasses. He wasn't showing as much nervousness as the foreigner, but he was pleased over something.

"I kept behind the bar, as near their table as I could, and pretended to play solitaire and wait for their orders, watching them as much as possible and trying to make out what they were talking about. Pretty soon they wanted another round of drinks. When I served them the old boy wanted to know if he could telephone to the city. He paid me the toll, and I showed him the telephone booth and heard him give his number. It was River 4600.

"When he got his party, he said: 'Is that you, Sim? Everything is all right. Yes, as expected. Let him go.'

"That was all. He went back to the table. I noticed that he kept tight hold all the time on a leather case. When they got to talking again, the foreigner kept pointing toward the case and began to get more excited. As near as I could make out what was happening, as they kept on talking and motioning, it was the black leather case the foreigner wanted, and the other man wouldn't let him have it.

"Finally the old boy got up with the case held tight under his arm and went toward the door with the girl and the foreigner following him, and the foreigner talking fast and loud. They got outside and all got into the car, the girl beside the old boy, who was driving, and the foreigner behind.

"As the old boy started the car, the foreigner made a grab for the case, but the old boy was too quick for him and dropped it to the floor. The car swerved toward the ditch.

"You can't drive a car that way," I said. "You'd better tell that fellow to lay off."

"I've told him," said the old boy. "If he keeps on bothering me, I'll tell him with a gun. He'll kill all of us."

"So they started, but they hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when I heard the girl scream. I got my motorcycle, which was out in front, and went down the road after them. There was sure going to be an accident if the foreigner kept grabbing at the man at the wheel. They must have been going pretty fast. I chased them a mile and a half, and several times I heard the girl cry out ahead in the dark.

"I was within two hundred yards of them when the girl screamed louder than ever, and I heard a crash. I knew they'd got into it, and they had. The car had gone into a tree at the side of the road.

"The old boy was dead, and the girl was unconscious—but the foreigner was gone."

"What about the leather case?" asked a man in the group about the constable. It was the question I could have shouted out myself.

"It was gone, too. The old boy did not have a single paper in his pockets, but after I got help and we got attention for the girl, we found a letter in her purse addressed to Miss Agnes Mitchell, Hartley house, Hartley. That was the only identification we had."

I telephoned over to Hartley and a man said he would be over. That's all I know about it. I've got to be getting over to the station. It's about time that man from Hartley was looking me up."

As he went out, I followed him, and on the sidewalk I introduced myself.

CHAPTER XI.

The constable looked at me for an instant as if uncertain whether to regard my manner of getting his narrative as altogether friendly.

"You were telling what I wanted to know," I suggested. "I came in because I was directed to inquire for you there. I did not interrupt you, but it was without intent of gaining information that I did not expect to gain otherwise."

"It's all right," said the constable. "You see through me, though. I was

UPLAND NEWS
ISSUED TUESDAYS AND FRIDAYS

Just thinking how uncomfortable I ought to have been with you listening, and I was pretty near getting sore. The first thing is the identification of the body. For the time being, it is in the station-house."

There was no possible doubt, even before I looked at the face, from which the constable drew the sheet which covered the body as it lay on a bench. The shabby little lawyer's rascally schemes, timid but villainous—necessary, probably, in his gnarled and unhappy life—were closed by death.

A deputy of the coroner was present, and he took a deposition by me which gave merely the dead man's name, stated that he had called several times at Hartley house on business and that I had no personal knowledge of the manner in which he came to his death.

That was all the authorities needed of me. A maid by the name of Agnes Mitchell had been given temporary employment at Hartley house. It was undoubtedly she who was the companion of the man who had been killed.

I asked the constable where I might see the maid and whether she was too badly injured to talk to any one. He said that she had been taken to the nearest hospital, which was ten miles away. He did not know how serious her injuries were. I had my driver take me to the hospital and found that as a representative of the family for which she was employed I might talk to her.

She was in pain and heavily bandaged, but was conscious and willing to talk.

"Agnes," I said, when the nurse had left us, "I am not here to make a great deal of trouble for you, but if I show leniency it will be in exchange for your confidence. We have known that an unconscious gang of rascals have had designs on Hartley house. Evidently you have yielded to some temptation they offered you. Deal with me frankly, and I'll be more than lenient."

She told me that the lawyer had tried to corrupt the maid, Anna, who had asked, later, for a month's leave. She found that she did not have the courage for the work. The lawyer evolved the plan of introducing a resolute and reliable woman into the house by the expedient adopted. Her instructions were to find and take away a manuscript she would find concealed in Jed's room. The abduction of Jed had made it easy for the maid to search through his belongings. Agnes did not know what value was attached to the manuscript. It was her obligation merely to get it.

The lawyer was to have an automobile waiting on the road beyond the oak grove. He was to be by the small door, through which the maid escaped. She ransacked Jed's room in the fashion of which I saw the result, and found the box cunningly hidden in his bedspring in a manner so contrived that except to a careful investigation it seemed to be a part of the structure of the bed.

Agnes said that she had planned to make her escape after my round of the house, but her excitement at finding the thing so earnestly sought betrayed her into incautiousness.

The lawyer's plan was to take the road we would think them less likely to take in case there were pursuit, and for that reason had gone toward Horwich. The Spaniard was not expected to meet them, but he knew they intended to go through Horwich, and he knew approximately the time they would get there if they were successful. The train which stopped at Horwich to let off passengers allowed him to act upon a plan which his suspicions of his lawyer's good faith suggested. He thought that if the lawyer saw a barroom light he would stop for a drink.

He was in Horwich unexpectedly to meet the girl and the lawyer. The scene in the Half Day barroom followed. The Spaniard was determined to have possession of the manuscript. The lawyer was determined he should not have it. They struggled as the lawyer tried to drive the car, having several narrow escapes from the ditch.

Then the Spaniard, in a rage, abandoned all caution and threw himself bodily on the lawyer, who lost control of the car and hit a tree. That was all the girl knew.

I thought a while, trying to make up my mind what further to do with the girl. Finally I said:

"Agnes, I am inclined to compromise with the law. I will prefer no charges against you now, and without forecasting the future, I may intimate that no charges ever will be preferred against you if I may have you removed to Hartley house, where you will have every care, but where you must remain under a sure but unobtrusive surveillance until we give you permission to go."

In spite of her pain the girl smiled.

"You would amuse the police," she

Happenings Here and There as Gathered by a News Special Representative in and About Etiwanda

The annual open air concert that was given Friday evening from the stage of the Etiwanda school grounds was one of the most enjoyable events of the summer. While not better from a musical standpoint than former concerts it held greater interest than usual for the audience as every performer was one of our young people. The orchestra has been making splendid progress and was one of the appreciated features, while the vocal solos and the whistling solo seemed to please everyone very greatly. Each number was very good in fact, and showed careful preparation. Some of the young people who are not gifted musically did their part in very effective stage decorations. The following program was given:

"My Isle of Golden Dreams" The Etiwanda Orchestra.
Piano Solo, "The Daisies" Gertrude Greenlee.
Flute Solo, "Souvenir" Berthold Dugdale.
Whistling solo, "Moonwinks" Mercedes Frost.

Piano Duet from Don Giovanni, Ruth Brownless and Irene Scott.
Vocal solo, "I Shall Meet You in the Morning," Gerald Cour.
Piano solo, "The Fountain" Evelyn Koch.

DISASTROUS END

tablishment to the public, is a public enemy. Wealth acquired by mere speculation or exploitation, by merely taking value from one man's pocket or many men's pockets and transferring it by manipulation to the pocket of another, without in any wise improving service or increasing values, is a parasite upon society. Yet that is the sort of wealth encouraged by the policies of the administration now in power as compared with property employed in actual production and service.

At the end of this era, how does it stand with the producers of the country,—employers and employed? To foot the bill for this great adventure the legitimate productive interests of the country are so burdened with taxation that the incentive for expansion has been removed. The costs of production have been so increased on the farm and in the factory, that the farmer is decreasing his planted acreage and the manufacturer is building few additions or extensions. Thus, to add to the high price of penalties of an inflated currency, we have the famine prospect accompanying reduced production. Labor is getting larger wages, apparently, than ever before, but when the dollar is reduced to terms of buying power, in most instances the actual compensation is less than it was in 1912. High costs have discouraged the home building, rendering the housing problem acute, thus making it difficult for millions of people, no matter what their income, to live in the comfort to which they were accustomed in the old days before the "new freedom" was turned on. The discontent aroused by this realization is making both the wage earner and the farmer an easy victim for the socialistic agitators who come forward with the theory that what the laboring producer needs is more of what has already been given him. The slowing up of the farmer and wage earner incident to this dissatisfaction and to the appeals of professed and camouflaged socialism, adds still more to productive costs and to prices. Thus the endless chain of more money for less value rolls on to its inevitable end.

All this is accompanied by speculative activities and by profiteering, not merely by so-called big business, but by little business and by individuals, which tend to constantly increase, rather than decrease, the inequalities in distribution of wealth. Worst of all, the people have not yet paid the gasoline or repair bill for this industrial joy ride.

The day of settlement has not yet come. Deflation has not yet been accomplished. Everybody knows, who has passed through such a period, that the masses pay the bills when the speculative era ends and the settlement period arrives; the bills are so big that it takes everybody to pay them.

The victim of "dope" doesn't need for his salvation a bigger dose of "dope" but a reduction of the dose as rapidly made as safety will permit. To cure the blight that has fallen upon the country through the application of socialistic nostrums by the administration, the country doesn't need heavier doses of the same medicine administered by the same old school of political quackery, even if it is proposed to put another doctor on the job. Senator Harding's motto of back to normal" is a prescription essential not merely to the national welfare, but to the rescue of the country from the wreck and ruin sure to follow in the wake of another period of political and economic debauchery such as that from which the American people are now suffering. Perhaps it would be better to say "Up to normal," because no retrocession or reaction is involved in getting a sick man's pulse and temperature to what it was before he fell ill.

When the skies are fair and the sea is smooth it may not mean disaster to take on as a pilot an amateur who sails by the weathervane rather than the compass; by a comet rather than a fixed star. But with the night black, the waves high and the sound of a high sea pounding in our ears, with the opposite coast strewn with shipwrecks driven on the shore by storm that has been raging, it is time to call to the helm a captain who sails by old charts and old landmarks, who is guided by experience and eyesight rather than by visions and voices in the air. To get the old ship out of the perils amid which it drifts is no task for the hands which took the helm off the sure, safe course to which its designers and builders committed it, and turned it through the crooked channel of socialism to the jagged edge of bolshevism.

When the train came in back in 1910

TEN years ago you might have seen one or two automobiles waiting outside the station, when the weather was pleasant.

Today the square is crowded with them. And most of the cars you generally see there are moderate-price cars.

There is one tire, at least, that makes no distinction between small cars and large cars so far as quality is concerned—the U. S. Tire.

Every U. S. Tire is just like every other in quality—the best its builders know how to build.

Anybody who tells you that owners of moderate-price cars are not interested in the quality of their tires has never met very many of them.

We come in contact with the small car owner every day and we have found that he is just as much interested as the big car owner.

Whatever the size of your car, the service you get out of U. S. Tires is the same. It isn't the car, but the man who owns the car, that sets the standard to which U. S. tires are made.

We feel the same way about it. That's why we represent U. S. Tires in this community.

Customer—I'm mighty particular about how my hair is cut. Do you think you can do a good job on it?

Barber—Well, I'm a good fairly decent, but if you want to see how your head first so you can see how you look.—American Legion Weekly.

CHALMERS

With HOT SPOT & RAM'SHORN accomplishes more with the low grade "gas" today than many cars did with a high test "gas" years ago

THE resourceful minds in the Chalmers engineering corps have wrestled with the gasoline problem, solved it; and now a Chalmers does undreamed of things with low grade gasoline.

Hot Spot and Ram's-horn, accepted by the public and the automobile trade alike, as the means of getting out the power that nature stored in gasoline, perform engineering miracles.

That they get the power out is well known.

That they increase mileage from "gas" is well known.

That they reduce vibration is well known.

That they save in up-keep and repairs a large sum each year is well known.

But how well known are these facts:

1. A Chalmers engine is practically carbon exempt.

2. A fouled spark plug is seldom found in a Chalmers.

3. An improperly adjusted carburetor is seldom experienced in a Chalmers.

Only those who drive a Chalmers know, and they will tell you that these are but a few of the reasons why a Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.
